Environmental and Social Governance (ESG) in Southeast Asia gets a boost

Ecolab, a global sustainability leader offering water, hygiene and infection prevention solutions and services, recently held an impactful event titled "ESG is NOW, not tomorrow" in a step aimed to inspire transformative change across the region.

The event strongly emphasized the immediate relevance of Environmental and Social Governance (ESG) in Southeast Asia, exploring the urgency and impact of accelerated water and energy actions in the face of global climate pressures. The platform drove key discussions and expert strategies to help companies apply significant changes toward ESG implementation while fostering economic growth.

Throughout the event, attendees gained access to a comprehensive range of key insights and best practices relevant to various industries, including Food & Beverage Manufacturing, Data Centers, Hospitality and Facilities. A prevailing theme emerging from the event was the significance of collaborative efforts across companies to drive meaningful change. Ecolab firmly believes that businesses must embrace ESG as a fundamental part of their operations to ensure long-term sustainability alongside financial growth.
