AgroSpectrum Envisaging Future | Updating Present ASIA

Ruler of Sharjah signs MoU with two universities in UK for sustainable agriculture

03 May 2023 | News

The MoU focuses on three educational fields, namely veterinary medicine, sustainable agriculture, and desert science

The MoU focuses on three educational fields, namely veterinary medicine, sustainable agriculture, and desert science

Dr Sheikh Sultan bin Muhammad Al Qasimi, Supreme Council Member and Ruler of Sharjah signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) on behalf of the University of Al Dhaid. The MoU was signed between the University of Al Dhaid, the University of Bristol, and the Royal Agricultural University in the United Kingdom at the Dr Sultan Al Qasimi Centre.

The MoU was also signed by Dr Evelyn Welch from the University of Bristol and Dr Peter McCaffery from the Royal Agricultural University. Its primary aim is to enhance cooperation among the three universities to develop scientific and educational expertise.

The MoU focuses on three educational fields, namely veterinary medicine, sustainable agriculture, and desert science. Additionally, the parties involved can discuss ways of cooperation in various research fields.

According to the MoU, the University of Al Dhaid, the University of Bristol and the Royal Agricultural University will cooperate to offer four programmes: a Bachelor of Sustainable Agriculture, a Bachelor of Animal Science, a Bachelor of Desert Sciences, and a PhD programme in veterinary medicine. These programmes and majors will be offered at the University of Dhaid, which will be opened next year.